TRANSLATION NOTES

A baum test is a type of projective test test used to analyze a person's emotions and personality. Patients are asked to draw a baum tree (hence the name of the test) and then a psychologist analyzes the shape of it as well as its details according to a set of guidelines to determine the kind of patient they are dealing with.

If you're curious about the protagonist's results:
A small overall tree indicates lack of self-confidence
A small trunk indicates weariness.
No branches indicates unsocial behavior
Shallow/no roots indicates feelings of exclusion

Thus we can see our protagonist isn't looking very good.

However, he does draw a small plant bud alongside a picture of him and the succubus holding hands, indicating there is something new growing inside him as well appart from all those negatives feelings, even if it is small.
